A Senior Democratic Operative From New York Described Jones' Payments To Himself As "Not A Great Look." "Lawrence Mandelker, a veteran campaign finance and election lawyer who previously worked for the late New York Democratic Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, told The Post that Jones' donor-funded salary was 'not a great look.' At best, it opens you up to a political attack. At worst, it opens you up to a legal attack,' Mandelker explained, adding that he would advise candidates against the practice. ‘Campaign money is supposed to be for campaign purposes,’ Mandelker said. ‘You’re not allowed to convert campaign money for personal use. It would not be proper. He’d have to justify it.’” (Josh Christenson and Carl Campanile, “Ex-NY Rep. Mondaire Jones Received Nearly $25K In Salary From Campaigns: ‘Not A Great Look’” The New York Post, 6/19/24)
